

STYLE OF INTERACTIONS

DESCRIPTION

You are considered competitive socially. You make room for competition with people around you. You might not let yourself being defeated in a social interaction. It might be that you wish to be noticed, but you are not very open in social interaction. Your closeness with the other people might be due to a certain "interest" and "logical reasoning" instead of the pure "closeness" and "friendship". You are close with the others and want to interact in a group because you know that your contribution is "needed" there.

COMPETITORS

TO DEVELOP

To develop, try to be a warmer person and care more to the feelings of people around you. Be a more sympathetic and humble person. Develop your communication skills; build a sincere friendship with people around you. Avoid being egoistic, avoid being too competitive since it could separate you further from your close friends. Occasionally, let yourself to be the one who give in during a social interaction. Respect the authority of the elders, respect the local wisdom around you.